WELL Health Technologies Corp. (TSX: WELL) (“WELL” or the “Company”), a company focused on consolidating and modernizing clinical and digital assets within the healthcare sector, is pleased to present this virtual sit-down interview with Chris Lahiji of LD Micro and Hamed Shahbazi, Chairman and CEO of WELL.

“The smaller a company is, the more important management becomes,” said Chris Lahiji, CEO and Founder of LD Micro. “I believe that our next presenter embodies what every investor large and small looks for in executive leadership.”

In the interview Mr. Shahbazi discusses the Company’s financial performance, revenue growth plan, corporate strategy, long-term vision, and acquisition pipeline. Over the past year WELL has acquired 14 companies, made two minority investments, expanded into the US, and saw its share price increase by over 400%.

“We had a very exhilarating 2020,” said Mr. Shahbazi. “It was a very sobering year. It was a year that tested us in every way humanly possible, but we really feel that we delivered for our community.”

In the interview, Mr. Shahbazi also commented:

“We have ten analysts that cover the story from larger banks to smaller banks – all in Canada today and they have us just over $100 million Canadian this year. Keep in mind, that we ended the year at a $94 million baseline revenue run-rate. If you add a little bit of organic growth to that without any acquisitions, you pretty much reach that $100 million. So, we are pretty much right on the doorstep of $100 million. We believe we will breakthrough these (consensus) estimates.”

“As a capital allocator it's important that if you want to continue to allocate capital you make some of it - and so these capital allocation stories, these opportunities, these companies - they really thrive when positive cash flow is redirected into acquiring more assets that create more positive cash flow and we believe we're just about to get to the really, really fun part - the really, really compelling part of the WELL Health story.”
